Disabled boy given overdose

A SEVERELY disabled boy was put on a drip after hospital staff gave him an overdose of painkillers over 48 hours – despite hits mother raising the alarm with a nurse.

Scott Harrison, who lives in Linton, has a very rare genetic disorder which has left him unable to walk, talk and barely able to see.

He was being treated on a children's ward at Addenbrooke's for an eye injury when he was given twice the correct dosage of painkillers – 20mls – on eight separate occasions without medical staff realising.

His mum Anya Sparks was appalled when she found out that the 14-year-old had been given an overdose.

The mum-of-three said: "He has been self-harming for 12 months, punching himself in the face, and a community nurse examined him at school several weeks ago and advised us to take him to hospital.

"We went to Addenbrooke's on February 22 and were in the emergency department for hours before we were sent up to the children's ward at 8.30pm.

"He had been in there a few days when a nurse asked if I would mind giving Scott his medication. I said no and when she came back with the paracetamol I said 'that's way too much' but she said 'no, that's the right amount we have been giving him'.

"I just gave him the amount he is prescribed and thought nothing more of it. It wasn't until we were getting ready to go home that a doctor came and said he couldn't go home as the pharmacist had noticed he had been given an overdose over two days.

"They had called the national poisons emergency helpline who advised that he needed to go on a drip for 15 hours."

The 47-year-old added: "I don't understand how they could have got that wrong because there were so many staff caring for him.

"A female doctor came to speak to us and she was really condescending. She said 'we are only human'. I'm shocked and appalled."

An Addenbrooke's spokesman said they "regret that Scott has had a poor experience" and are investigating.

He said: "Providing safe patient care is a priority and we need to ensure that any shortfalls, should they be identified, are addressed at the earliest opportunity."

Painting the whole town RED!

THERE were red noses all around in Haverhill on Friday – and not because it was cold.

Schools, nurseries and businesses dressed up and had fun to raise money for Comic Relief. Izzy Croston, 9, pictured above, joined other pupils at Ridgewell Primary School dressing up in PJs and dressing gowns... and wearing red, or course.

Hospital ranked top out of 149 in the UK

BY LIZZY BUCHAN

Email: editorial@haverhillweeklynews.co.uk

A HOSPITAL trust has been given a clean bill of health by coming top in a national report.

West Suffolk Foundation Trust was ranked first out of 149 trusts in the country in a new study by health policy consultant MHP Health Mandate.

The report is based on priorities identified by the public and compares hospitals using weighted scores.

A wide variety of data was used included infection control rates, complaints, cancelled operations, patient feedback and waiting times.

West Suffolk Hospital scored particularly highly on waiting times and involving patients in decisions about their care.

A spokesman for West Suffolk NHS Foundation Trust said: "We are pleased that we have performed well in this latest report, which looks at a variety of different quality indicators and compares trusts based on the issues which matter to the public."

"It shows that we are performing well

CLEAN BILL OF HEALTH: West Suffolk Hospital is top in the country for quality in a variety of key areas, including length of stay, waiting times and the number of patients who would recommend the hospital to family or friends.

"We strive to deliver high quality, safe and effective care for everyone using West Suffolk Hospital. Despite these good results, we know that we do not always get things right and will continue listening to our patients and staff to learn lessons and look for ways to improve further."

"Our aim is to ensure every single patient coming to the hospital receives the best possible care and has a positive experience."

West Suffolk MP Matthew Hancock said: "West Suffolk Hospital should be proud to be at the top of the country for overall hospital quality."

"This is an outstanding achievement and the result of hard work by the staff at the hospital."

"I know they will keep pushing to improve, but this study shows the hospital is already doing a great job."

10th festival offers more beer and more bands

MORE beers and more music than ever before will be on offer as a pub hosts its 10th annual beer festival.

The Plough at Brockley Green near Hundon will be expecting its usual crowds for the festival over the Easter Bank Holiday weekend.

Music starts on Thursday, March 28, with local singer Jade Donno at 8pm, then on Friday, March 29, at 8.30pm there will be music from Jurassic Rock. Saturday will feature Miniditch at 3pm, and at 8.30pm,

The Good, the bad, the ugly... and Jim.

Finally on Sunday, March 31, at 3pm there will be a performance from The Intruders and The Indie Killers at 8pm.

The theme for this year's festival is 'Coastal Brews', and there will be more than 25 real ales and ciders from coastal breweries across the UK (including rare and occasional brews).

The Plough will be open all day everyday throughout the festival.

Pirate flag flies at village school

SOME fearsome looking pirates were seen at a primary school this week.

It was the turn of Kedington Primary School's 58 Year 5 and 6 pupils – aged between 8 and 11 years – to put on the spring term production.

They enjoyed dressing up for their parts in 'Pirates of the Curry Bean', which was rehearsed last week for an audience from the village Friendship Club, as well as parents.

Two more performances were held at the school this week.

Music teacher Hannah Vestey had coached all the youngsters to perform the songs in the show, with two or three children taking turns to play each part.

This week a sickness bug hit the school and many youngsters were unable to perform. Among those who stepped in at the last minute was 11-year-old Marlise Bush, who had to learn her lines just the night before the performance, to play the leading role of Lisa.

Tickets were sold to cover the cost of the production and the Friends of the School group ran raffles at each performance to boost funds.

Year 3 and 4 pupils will stage a production during the summer term and the school's youngest children will take their turn for the nativity production at Christmas.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Stalker sentencing is delayed for mental health assessment

A STALKER who had a knife and rope in the boot of his car will not be sentenced until next month.

Nigel Proctor, 44, had denied a charge of harassing a woman, by watching her at the Haverhill pharmacy where she worked 10 to 15 times in four months, on one occasion with binoculars.

He was convicted after a trial at Bury Magistrates Court on February 25, but his case was adjourned for sentence until Tuesday for a pre-sentence report to be prepared.

Magistrates agreed to a further adjournment until April 11, so that a mental health assessment can be made on Proctor, of Girtton Road, Haverhill. His conditional bail was extended until the next hearing.

Rape trial jury to consider verdict

A FORMER St John Ambulance leader accused of repeatedly raping a schoolgirl has told a jury that the attacks never happened.

Anthony Farrant, 51, was giving evidence at his trial at Ipswich Crown Court, describing the girl's allegations as "completely untrue."

Farrant, of Eastern Avenue, Haverhill, has pleaded not guilty to six charges of rape, three of oral rape, two of assault by penetration and one of sexual assault.

It is alleged by the prosecution that Farrant had raped and sexually abused the teenager on an increasingly regular basis, up to 40 times over a three-year period.

On Tuesday Farrant went into the witness box to tell the jury of seven women and five men that there was no truth in any of the allegations which they had heard the girl make in a 90-minute DVD recorded interview.

Giving evidence, Farrant said that on one occasion when the girl claimed she had been raped by him in a lane in Haverhill, he had given her a lift in his car but said nothing inappropriate had taken place.

BY JO DEEKS

Email: editorial@haverhillweeklynews.co.uk

Asked by defence barrister Jonathan Goodman if he had ever raped, sexually abused or taken indecent photographs of the girl, Farrant replied: "No, certainly not."

Farrant told the court that he had been shocked when police arrived at his home in February last year to arrest him on suspicion of the offences.

He said: "I couldn't believe it was happening."

"It was surreal. I was dumbstruck and didn't know what to say."

Farrant said a medical condition meant that he was unable to have spontaneous sex with anyone.

He said it would take at least an hour for his prescribed medication to take effect.

Allegations that he had made threats about what would happen to the girl if she told anyone what was alleged to have happened were untrue, he said, as were claims that he had injured her.

Earlier in the trial, a school friend spoke of how she became concerned about the health of the alleged victim.

Speaking via a video link, the friend told the jury that she discovered the girl was self harming and had developed anorexia.

The teenage friend, who often spent weekends with the girl, said some of her injuries were obvious. They included bruising to the face and a blistered scar on her hand.

The jury heard allegations that when the girl had gone to her GP to seek treatment for an infection, the doctor had noticed bruising around her groin. The girl had tried to explain it away by saying it was from play fighting.

She had dismissed concerns about the injuries and her refusal to eat saying: "Don't worry about me".

The friend said she believed the girl was hiding something.

Earlier when the alleged victim gave evidence, the court was told that she had turned to self-harming in an effort to make herself appear less attractive to Farrant.

The week-long trial drew to a close yesterday and the jury is expected to retire to consider its verdict today.

RED NOSE FUN: Pupils and staff at Ridgewell School dressed in their PJs, while a pupil at Samuel Ward Academy, right, gets into the spirit of the day

HEAD SHAVE: Newsagent Peter Upton, who dyed his hair red, then had it shaved off with his beard for Comic Relief

Town turns red for a good cause!

BY JO DEEKES

Email: editorial@haverhillweeklynews.co.uk

PIJAMAS and red noses were the dress code for the day when Haverhill got behind Comic Relief.

School children and staff at various firms joined in the fun and raised thousands of pounds for the charity.

All 64 pupils at Ridgewell Primary School paid to wear pyjamas for the day, as well as selling cakes to raise a total of £69.50.

A spokesman for the school said: "We were pleased as we are such a small school. The children had a brilliant time and 'onesies' seemed to be the thing to wear."

At Samuel Ward Academy in Haverhill, students paid to attend in non-uniform and held a range of activities. There were raffles, guess the flavour of the crisp, whack a rat, whack a mole, specially made cake-pops, bobbing for red noses and guess the baby photo, all contributing to a total raised of just over £1,250.

At Stepping Stones pre-school, based at Coupsals Primary School in Haverhill, children dressed up in red.

Town Mayor Pat Hanlon judged the afternoon session and Tyler Whybrow won a book, Ben Charmichel judged the morning session and Sophie Regan was the winner.

At Place Farm Primary Academy in Haverhill, eight-year-old pupil Emily Eaton organised a sponsored red jelly

RED NOSE: Jelly racing and red nose bobbing were some of the zany antics which helped to raise cash at Haverhill for the Comic Relief appeal race on Monday. Pupils were joined by head teacher Delyth Reed and dinner lady Diane Stratton. All of Emily's year group cheered on the competitors as they raced carrying wobbly jellies on a plate.

Emily's mum Jill helped organise the event, which raised £40.

She said: "We were originally doing it on the Monday before, but the weather was ghastly. This Monday, the sun was shining. The children had lots of fun."

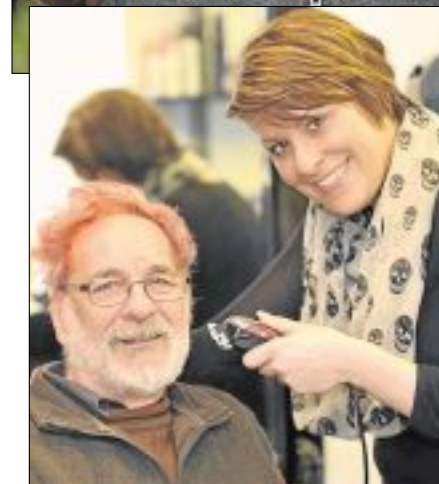

At Westfield Primary School, pupils were also busy raising funds, with events organised by the Year 6 school council team.

Last Thursday the school held a bake sale with profits exceeding £200, on Friday they held a non-uniform day and wacky hair event to raise more funds.

At Haverhill Leisure Centre, staff paid to wear their pyjamas for the day and organised a guess the number of sweets in the jar competition. Staff member Kirsty Millard was also sponsored to run a marathon distance on a treadmill set up in the centre's reception. They raised £170.

Local dealer, Drive Vauxhall, held its innovative 'Where's ADAM?' campaign, which raised over a bumper £1,000 for Comic Relief.

They placed stickers of the ADAM, the brand new city car from Vauxhall, around the town centres of Haverhill and Bury St Edmunds last week and asked the locals to send a picture of themselves with the stickers to the retailer. For every snap the retailer received, £1 was donated to Red Nose Day.

Now off with that beard!

NEWSAGENT Peter Upton sacrificed his hair and beard for a dramatic role – and to raise cash for Comic Relief.

Peter's transformation took place on Red Nose Day, and as a result £215 was collected from customers and friends for Comic Relief.

The Kedington newsagent normally boasts a fairly full head of hair and an impressive beard but he decided to dye his hair red and then shed his locks for the part of John Clarke in Ketton Players' forthcoming production of Calendar Girls. Helping Peter to achieve his new image was Cheryl Collins of Salon 56 in Kedington.

Calendar Girls will be performed at Kedington Community Centre on the March 22, 23 and 24.

Tickets are available from Kedington Butchers, Nisa Stores, or call (01440) 713137.

FREE PARK: Parking attendant Mo Munger, Cllr Anne Gower, of St Edmundsbury Borough Council, and Alan Reed, assistant parking services manager

Come and meet charity walker Andy

RESIDENTS are asked to turn out to give a warm welcome to a man on a mammoth sponsored walk as he passes through their town.

Andy Peddle, 70, will arrive in Haverhill on Saturday morning as part of an 18-month sponsored walk across the UK, hoped to raise £100,000 for the Salvation Army's work with homeless people and the victims of human trafficking.

Anyone who would like some exercise is invited to join members of the Haverhill Salvation Army church, who will accompany Andy on his final mile into Haverhill.

They will meet him at the junction of Chalkstone Way and Sturmer Road at 9.30am, or can be joined at Hamlet Road a few minutes later.

Dressed in top hat and tails, Andy will walk to the Salvation Army hall in Chantry Road, Haverhill, arriving at 10am to tell his story over tea and coffee. Visitors are welcome to go along and meet him and make a donation.

Andy will visit the majority of UK Salvation Army churches and charity shops, as well as every football ground, totalling 7,900 miles or 15 million steps. To support him visit www.just-giving.com/andy-peddle.

Park for free – on Friday afternoons

CALLS for free parking have been answered – but only on Friday afternoons.

A new 'Free after 3' scheme was launched at the ticket machine in the Lower Downs Slade car park in Haverhill on Friday afternoon.

All car parks in Haverhill will be 'Free after 3' on Fridays, to encourage shoppers to support town centre businesses.

Friday was chosen as this is normally the day when the town's annual late night shopping event and firework display is held and parking charges are normally suspended from 4pm.

Cllr Anne Gower, St Edmundsbury Borough Council Cabinet member for Haverhill, who attended the launch, said: "From Friday, April 26, parking in all our car parks in Haverhill will be free after 3pm on Fridays.

BY JO DEEKS

Email: editorial@haverhillweeklynews.co.uk

"During the wide-ranging review of our car parks, we consulted town centre businesses about encouraging more people into town by offering a free parking period during the week.

"I am delighted to say that, having agreed the council's budget, we will be going ahead with the scheme for a one-year trial."

Free car parking available after 4pm on Fridays in the run-up to Christmas was being extending to year round and adding the extra hour would allow shoppers to catch the regular provisions market.

The new move comes after calls for free parking to be introduced at last week's police priority setting meeting.

Those present pointed out that central car park off Jubilee Walk in Haverhill is often half empty, with shoppers preferring to park free for 3 hours at the nearby Tesco car park, rather than pay 30p for one hour or £1.10 for up to four hours. It was felt that people would be encouraged to use the town centre and stop parking on pavements in the High Street, if charges were removed.

Cllr Tim Marks said there was some movement on car parking charges, but that income was needed by the council to fund other work in the town.

Town's early morning ambulance cover is cut

AMBULANCE chiefs say a town's service will improve – despite axing six hours a day of early morning cover.

Haverhill's rapid response vehicle is no longer manned from 1am to 7am, seven days a week.

Paramedics have raised concerns that patients could wait longer, as Haverhill's ambulance is frequently away covering for Cambridge.

A Spokesman for the East of England Ambulance Trust new interim chief executive Andrew Morgan aimed to reduce back office department budgets by up to 10 per cent, to invest in frontline and fund improvements. She said: "So far this includes the recruitment of 200 extra frontline staff, making 15 extra ambulances available to be staffed on overtime to increase cover, giving more power and responsibility to managers at local level and tackling the ongoing issue of handover delays at hospitals."

There is nothing here to interest anyone

I TOTALLY agree with Donna's letter published last week.

I moved to Haverhill 30-plus years ago and my daughters enjoyed the schools etc but now they have moved on to pastures new – new jobs and university.

They have now experienced that Haverhill is pretty poor in amenities. I think they are right.

I remember when I lived in London, going to Southend was a BIG day out, now I hear myself saying I will “pop” to Cambridge, which is the same number of miles from my house when I lived in London.

There is nothing here to make me go down into the town, except to pay bills at the Post Office, or the odd trips to the charity shops.

At least when I go to my daughters, I get the chance to “mooch” round different shops even if I don't spend any cash. Haverhill NEEDS a Primark, or Matalan – NOT any more betting shops, estate agents etc.

Haverhill needs more life put into it – and soon, before we lose our young people to pastures new.

Kim Hatton

Listen to US please!

LAST Monday during a presentation at a public meeting in Haverhill, Mr Guy McGregor, from Suffolk County Council, suggested that people should take the trouble to visit one of the flagship schemes in Felixstowe – Hamilton Road.

Since Will Austin, our Town Clerk, had already visited twice and shared his observations with the meeting, I thought that I would approach this from a different angle and thus have sought the views of a number of influential people who live and work in Felixstowe.

In no particular order the comments received are as follows:

■ Pedestrians do not like it as it confuses them

■ The elderly avoid it where possible as they are fearful

■ Disabled and particularly the hard of hearing hate it

■ The oversized zebra crossing is a massive “white elephant” because no one understands who has priority and it has no legal standing – it is an accident spot waiting to happen

■ Young speeding drivers love being able to race through the

■ Businesses say that footfall is down against levels before the shared space

■ We did not want it – that McGregor chap forced it on us against our will

■ It has not stopped the on-street parking – they just park anywhere, even blocking the street

■ It looks attractive when empty but is a nightmare to negotiate

The current Mayor, Cllr Mike Deacon, would be delighted to discuss Hamilton Road with you, Mr McGregor. Indeed I believe there has even been a survey to substantiate all of these issues. Cllr Deacon also tells me that this was not a popular decision and went directly against the wishes of the residents.

Yesterday, while Cllr Deacon (the Mayor) was discussing this, another Mayor (either Beccles or Bungay) overheard and contributed that their town too is about to suffer from Mr McGregor's decision to implement shared-space against the wishes of residents.

Today I spoke with businesses in Queen Street to assess their feelings regarding the possibility of shared-space and they said that it is discriminatory and if it goes ahead, they will seek to have the gates at Queen Street removed.

I also took the opportunity of asking people who live and work in Bury St Edmunds what they thought of the shared space in Angel Hill – amusingly they thought shared space meant “parking” and “driving” – when I explained that it was supposed to mean pedestrians and cars co-exist in the same space, they were absolutely stunned. These are people who are in that area on a regular basis and commented that it felt that you took your life in your hands when trying to negotiate across to the Abbey Gardens – since car drivers clearly do not have an understanding of shared space!

As we have said time and again, the High Street in Haverhill is shut to traffic all day on Saturday – and it works. It makes it a really nice place to shop and browse and it becomes a thriving hub of activity. It is what the people of Haverhill want – and we live and work here; you do not, Mr McGregor.

When Cllr Byrne challenged why Mr McGregor felt he had the right to go against the wishes of 75% of Haverhill residents, he responded that he was the Portfolio Holder for Roads and Transport and that the decision rested with him.

You may be a Portfolio Holder but you were elected to represent the electorate – not make unilateral undemocratic decisions.

Let there be light

I WRITE with regard to your page 2 article referring to the street lighting being turned off.

I live in Burton End. Shortly after midnight, the road from the recreation roundabout, up to School Lane is turned off.

On a regular basis from around 2.45am until 3.40am, about the time people are leaving Bar Vu night club, there is continuous shouting and arguing from drunk passers-by.

Also on a regular basis, there is vandalism committed to parked vehicles. I personally have had damage caused to my car, wing mirrors ripped off, even though I always tuck them in when parked. I've had dents caused by punching the roof of the car and side panel damage. My front gate was lifted from its hinges and thrown into the road.

I have made calls to the police on two occasions just last month, but by the time the police arrive, there is no sign of the culprits.

Apart from the vandalism side, I am concerned about the danger from tripping in pitch black.

If on occasions, I return home after midnight, the kerb and step into my garden is not visible, I have to grope my way to the front door, so from a pure safety point of view, there should be some lighting.

Rather than turn off all street lights, would it not make sense to have staggered lighting; alternate lights on at least one side of the street?

This would still create a saving to the council and at the same time there would be sufficient lighting for pedestrians on both sides of the street to walk without the risk of stumbling, being unable to see where they are walking.

Does the council not have a duty of care, to provide a safe means of passage – ie pavements free from danger or risk?

I realise this is a problem in several areas of the town. Perhaps the Weekly News could assist in starting a campaign or a petition to make the streets of Haverhill safe again.

Switching costs lives

HAVING read with interest the various editorial and letters on the subject of street lights being switched out. I thought I'd add my thoughts on the subject.

It is clear that the county council is committed to making savings by a reduction in power usage from the suppliers.

I can only assume that the first thing they did was to approach the DNO (District Network Operator), presumably UKPN, to discuss the options open to them to reduce their annual bill.

Street lighting in most regions is charged at different rates throughout the night, usually on a half-hourly basis with the costs being calculated for the individual piece of equipment, each piece having a different value which is then multiplied by the number they have in their inventory.

The street lighting monitoring and control system installed in Suffolk is produced by Telensa: this system allows not only for part-time operation but also to dim the light while at the same time keeping the area lit and saving money.

This can be achieved using the appropriate lamps and gear which may mean replacing the lantern for a more modern unit which may be LED, the latter providing good night levels over a longer period with much less maintenance.

I for one would prefer to see the use of dimming over switching over as other local authorities have found to their cost – switching out costs lives. Name and address supplied

COMMUNITY NEWS

TOWNSWOMEN'S GUILD

At the February meeting, the chairman read a letter received from St Nicholas Hospice thanking Guild members for the donation of £48. There will be a quiz at Wickhambrook on March 29 and it was decided to send a team. Arrangements were made for Guild members to see the forthcoming production of Joseph and his Technicolour Dreamcoat to be held at the Arts Centre on Wednesday, April 27.

At the next meeting of the Handicraft Group, members will be making flowerpot men. It was decided that Haverhill Guild should arrange a quiz night for September 25 and Mrs Betty Jennings, our president, has agreed to arrange questions.

The evening was then handed over to Mrs Jane Coe, an expert flower arranger who once again had everyone enthralled with her artistry of flower.

The next meeting is on March 26 and will be the AGM. New members and guests will be made very welcome. We meet at the West End Hall, Withersfield Road at 7.15pm on the fourth Tuesday of each month. Just come along or telephone the chairman, Mrs Hampson, on 01440 714730.

LOCAL HISTORY GROUP

Tim Ellis, master thatcher and born raconteur, entertained and informed the Haverhill and District Local History Group with his recent talk on his highly skilled and ancient craft.

We were able to examine the different types of reed and straw and the tools used in harvesting and working with them (some inherited from past masters in the craft, others hand-made as needed). And we chuckled over tales of just what thatchers see when working on roofs – shades of George Formby!

And, in March, we look forward to an equally lively talk by popular local speaker Pip Wright on John Heigham Steggall – the son of a respectable parson, he ran away to live with the gypsies, and went on to be, among other things, a surgeon, sailor, soldier and parish priest in the course of a life spanning 90 years.

The meeting, which is free to members and only £2 to other visitors, will be held in Haverhill's Art Centre Studio at 7.30pm on Wednesday – refreshments are available.

Lucky Lottery shop is back in business

THE shop where Lottery winner Adrian Bayford bought his £148 million Euromillions ticket is back in business this week, after having its Lottery sales suspended for the past three months.

Sanjay Patel, who runs the Premier Stores in Queen Street, Haverhill, with his brother Parish, attended the country hotel where the Bayfords' big win was announced last summer. Sales at the shop – just a stone's throw away from the music shop which Adrian owned at the time of the win – soared.

However, mystery still surrounds the reason why Camelot suspended sales of Lottery sales at the shop on December 18 last year, only reinstating them last Saturday.

Parish Patel said Lottery sales in the shop were quite busy on Saturday, but came to a grinding halt when the terminal broke down twice in two days.

He said: "We were pretty busy on Saturday. We have sold a lot of tickets since the big win. I have also been told that someone else won £1 million with a ticket bought here

editorial@haverhillweeklynews.co.uk

last year, but I don't know who it was.

"We would love to talk about the suspension, but we are not allowed to. If it had been that serious, they would have suspended sales permanently."

A Spokesman for Camelot said: "Camelot takes matters of propriety very seriously. Our aim as operator of The National Lottery is to raise as much money as possible for National Lottery Good Causes through selling lottery tickets in a socially-responsible way. This involves running The National Lottery with the utmost integrity."

"We expect each and every one of our retailers to act as an advocate for, and uphold the values of, The National Lottery. If a retailer falls short of what is expected of them and what they agree to as part of their signed, contractually-binding National Lottery Retailer Agreement, we have robust processes in place to deal with that."

"We are committed to investigating allegations made against any retailer selling National Lottery tickets. However, it's important to remember that such allegations are very rare – we work with over 36,500 outlets throughout the UK, with millions of transactions taking place every day.

"If a retailer is found to be in breach of their Retailer Agreement or we believe that their conduct is likely to undermine the integrity and security of The National Lottery – or player confidence in it – we reserve the right to terminate their Retailer Agreement and remove our National Lottery terminal."

Adrian Bayford, 41, and wife Gillian, 40, a former children's ward worker at Addenbrooke's Hospital, became Britain's second richest lottery winners after their windfall last August.

The pair shunned a millionaire lifestyle at first, taking an Easyjet flight to Scotland with their two children. Despite initially vowing to continue working in his music shop, Adrian closed the doors for the last time in December and the family has since moved into a £6 million country mansion.

From Perth to Sydney, by bicycle

LONG DISTANCE:
Aaron Castell is taking part in a charity bike ride to raise funds for Water Aid

A CYCLIST is taking on a mammoth 85-mile-a-day journey from Perth to Sydney. Aaron Castell, 25, of Chapel Drive, Haverhill, is tackling the 31-day challenge for Water Aid and hopes to raise £5,000. He said: "It's something we take for granted every day but having the challenge of needing water and not having it is closely connected. "What they do is brilliant." Aaron started the cycle ride on March 17 and the first few days will take him through the pure Australian outback where water and other resources will be especially low. He said: "There's a piece of road that's 1,000 miles with nothing between it. "That will be the hardest part. As long as I have planned it right everything should be OK." Aaron, who works at Booking.com in Milton, has previously competed in the London Triathlon and wanted to take the chance to do something bigger and better for charity. The 25-year-old flies back to the UK on April 18 but wants to beat his allotted 31-day time and do the challenge in 29 days. He said: "I have done what I can and I'm as ready as I can be. "It's going to be a bit of a shock but I'd love to do it in less than 30 days." Visit www.justgiving.com/perth2sydney2013 to donate.

Scratch and sniff – and help snare cannabis growers

DO you recognise the smell of cannabis?

Members of the public will receive 'scratch and sniff' cards through their letter boxes which replicate the smell of cannabis in its growing state to help them identify cannabis factories concealed in residential areas.

Crimestoppers and the police have teamed up to combat cannabis cultivation after a 15 per cent increase in the number of factories in 2011 and 2012.

Over the past two years 46 farms have been identified in Suffolk.

Robin Pivett, controlled drug liaison officer for Suffolk Police, said: "If you grow only one cannabis plant it is still illegal but we are focusing our resources on large scale operations.

"There is a massive profit margin for people who are doing this. We hope that when people are going about their daily life, at work or socialising, they will recognise the smell and they will phone Crimestoppers."

The production of cannabis is not only dangerous to people's

BY LIZZY BUCHAN

Email: editorial@haverhillweeklynews.co.uk

health but can also have a negative effect on safety as growers often divert electricity away from the main grid which can cause fires due to faulty wiring.

Mr Pivett added: "We are relying on the public to be our eyes and ears and to report anything suspicious to us."

The UK National Problem Profile report on Commercial Cannabis Cultivation produced in 2012 identified that commercial or industrial properties are being used less and there has been a significant move towards residential dwellings over multiple sites to grow cannabis plants.

Lord Ashcroft, founder and chairman of Crimestoppers, said: "Cannabis farms grow more than just drugs.

"Those who are cultivating cannabis tend to be involved in other areas of crime and are often involved in related gang crime and other violent crimes involving firearms.

"These individuals use violence and intimidation to carry out these crimes and endanger the lives of those around them.

"We want to help put an end to this and the funding that cultivation provides to serious organised crimes like human trafficking and gun crime."

Supplying cannabis, which is a Class B drug, can lead to a 14-year prison sentence.

Anyone with information is asked to call Crimestoppers anonymously on 0800 555 111 or go to www.crimestoppers-uk.org. Tips will be treated anonymously and callers will not have to appear in court.

SETTING SAIL: Pupils at Westfield Primary set sail in their new play boat
Picture by Keith Jones

Pupils set sail in their new boat

PUPILS at a new primary school can now 'sail' around their playground.

A play boat has been installed in the playground at Westfield Primary School in Haverhill and is already proving popular with its 300 pupils.

Pupils moved into the brand new school next to Samuel Ward Academy in Chalkstone Way last September, leaving behind their old building in Manor Road.

Sara Williams, Chairman of the Friends of Westfield, said the group's main priority for the past year had been fund-raising for new playground equipment, to replace a popular old bus-shaped climbing frame which had been left behind at the old school.

The group raised £1,100 towards the play bus, with the school meeting the rest of the £1,800 cost.

Mrs Williams said: "The bus at the old school was a bit rickety, but the children really loved it.

"We thought the boat would make a good replacement for it."

Chickens raised by 'Good Life' students

EIGHT battery chickens that were rescued by a school last December are a hit with pupils and staff.

A group of 24 pupils at Castle Manor Academy in Haverhill have been operating a rota to look after the birds, rescued from a farm in Coventry.

The scheme is led by teacher Becky Baldwin, who owns chickens and ducks herself.

Mrs Baldwin said: "Students and staff are visiting the chickens at every opportunity and are enamoured by their cheeky characters."

"Small groups of students gather at lunch around the chickens to feed them treats and watch them get up to mischief, scratching for bugs and rolling in the dust."

To get involved, email bbaldwin@castlepartnership.org.uk.

Footballer, 21, jailed 'for nasty piece of violence'

A FOOTBALLER who armed himself with a knife and a crowbar outside a pub has been jailed for eight months.

Joe Boreham, 21, who plays for Haverhill Rovers, had argued with his girlfriend and sent her abusive messages.

He arrived at a pub where she was drinking with friends and spat on their table.

Ipswich Crown Court heard last Thursday details of the incident at Benson Blakes in Bury St Edmunds on an evening in January.

When a man inside the pub tried to calm Boreham down, the defendant punched him in the face, before picking up a stool.

BY JO DEEKS

Email: editorial@haverhillweeklynews.co.uk

Outside there was a scuffle, in which a second man who tried to intervene was also punched.

Prosecutor Robert Sadd said that Boreham, of Landseer Court, Haverhill, had produced a craft knife from his bag and then went to his van, which was parked nearby, and returned holding a crowbar.

Police arrived shortly afterwards and Boreham was arrested, after officers armed with a Taser confronted him.

Mr Sadd said Boreham's girlfriend

Elspeth Woodley had told him she was going bowling with friends, but he later saw her at a pub. She left with her friends and moved on to Benson Blakes.

After sending abusive messages demanding to know where Miss Woodley was, Boreham arrived at the pub to confront her.

When interviewed Boreham told police that he had been angry with his girlfriend and admitted punching two men at the pub after getting "wound up" by their attempts to intervene.

Boreham pleaded guilty to two offences of common assault, one of being in possession of an offensive weapon and one of having a bladed article in a public place.

Simon Gladwell, said Boreham had not revealed the blade of the craft knife, and believed when he took it from his bag it had prevented the incident from escalating.

Mr Gladwell said: "He quite clearly has a lot of issues that he needs to address, some of which have been made worse by his drinking."

Mr Recorder Guy Ayers told Boreham: "You have some very worrying attitudes towards women and what constitutes proper behaviour in a relationship."

"This was a very nasty piece of violence and potential violence in a public place."

FASHION students have been invited to design original garments for a charity fashion show in April.

The course is for students who wish to embark on the first stage of training and education for fashion, with the emphasis on innovation, skills and creativity. Topics include drawing and visual research, pattern cutting, sewing and construction, knitting, embroidery and fabric manipulation. The course is project-based and teaching takes place in design studios and skills workshops.

Warning follows spate of thefts

SEVEN thefts from cars and garages have been reported in just two days.

Police in Haverhill are appealing for information following a number of incidents around the town between last Thursday evening and Friday evening.

Thieves broke into a garage and Landrover Freelander in Western Avenue, and stole power tools and cash.

Between 10am and 10.20am on Friday, a red Suzuki Vitara in a car park at Meeting Walk was broken into, and a satnav and toiletries were stolen.

A black rucksack and Nikon camera were stolen from a white Renault van in Kirtling Place between 10.15am and 10.40am on Friday.

BY JO DEEKS

Email: editorial@haverhillweeklynews.co.uk

The windscreen of a Renault Scenic parked in Billings Close was smashed at around 10.45am Thursday.

In Cambridge Way between 4.30pm on Thursday and 8.10am on Friday, a window of a Renault van was smashed and the vehicle searched, but nothing stolen.

In Gloucester Road between 9.10am and 9.40am on Friday a window of a Renault Clio was smashed and a handbag stolen from under the front passenger seat.

In Bishops Close, a garage door was forced sometime between March 10 and 15, but no entry appeared to have been made.

The incidents follow a number of similar thefts in Haverhill since January and repeated warnings by police for drivers not to leave valuables on show in their vehicles and to make sure that they are locked.

Tools were also taken from a metal container in a rear garden at Nunnery Green, Wickhambrook, broken into between 6.30pm and 9.20pm on Thursday.

Two chainsaws, a Bosch drill, Partner petrol disc cutter and Partner concrete breaker were stolen.

Anyone who saw anything suspicious in the area or who has any information on any of the incidents should call 101. For the Wickhambrook theft call Pc Mark Ellis on 101.

A STUDENT visited Twickenham to be presented with a new rugby kit his school had helped to design.

Jack Dachtler attends Samuel Ward Academy in Haverhill, one of the schools that won a competition run by Canterbury, the company that makes the England rugby kit.

He went along to the England versus Italy game and was one of a group of children who carried a giant England shirt on to the pitch to promote rugby playing in schools. The school received 290 of the kits.

'It's not like you have a choice, you just have to get on with it'

BRIGHT FUTURE: Jonathan has transformed his life

Picture: Duncan Lamont 898482/8

After years of struggling with his speech, Jonathan Mitchell has finally found his voice. With his future looking bright, he now wants to help others beat 'the monster in their mouth'. Interview by Alice Ryan.

HOLDING the phone to his ear, listening hard to the voice at the end of the line, Jonathan Mitchell tried to speak – but no words came. His chest was tight, his tongue stiff, his lips totally rigid. He was battling a stammer. And it felt like he was losing.

"I was about 18. I'd been out with friends and I wanted to order a taxi home," recounts Jonathan.

"I dialled the number, but when they picked up I froze; I couldn't get a word out. So I ended up hanging up – and walking the five miles back to my parents' house in Harston. Five miles . . .

"At the time it was really upsetting, I felt too ashamed to tell anyone, so I kept it to myself. It's hard to explain to someone who doesn't stammer, but everything seizes up: your mouth, your tongue, your palate, your lips. And you feel as if you can't catch your breath, as if you haven't the breath to be able to make a sound.

"It's extremely, extremely frustrating. Sometimes I've felt so angry, so full of tension, that I've unleashed an actual scream of frustration. You know what you want to say – but you feel like you've got no voice."

To hear Jonathan speaking today – calm, composed and incredibly eloquent – it's hard to believe he was ever so tongue-tied. "I have come a very long way. If I were to revisit myself as a 13-year-old boy, I'd be amazed at the transformation. I don't often think about it but, looking back, I do feel proud."

Now 33, Jonathan, who lives in Fen

Ditton, shared his story for the second Cambridge Stammering Open Day, which took place last Saturday. An event designed to both raise awareness of stammering and offer support to people living with the condition, it was held at Ridgefield Primary School and was sponsored by the Dominic Barker Trust.

The organisation was set up by Dominic's parents in memory of their son, whose crippling stammer drove him to take his own life.

"There is a real kinship in meeting other people who have stammers," adds Jonathan. "And it can also be very inspirational, meeting people who've achieved their ambitions despite this added obstacle. You're going through life without the easy communication skills most people take for granted and, inevitably, that does shape the route you take."

Jonathan says his stammer developed when he was a small boy. "I first became aware of it when I was 7 or maybe 8, and at that point I was excused from reading aloud in class. The very fact I was excused suggests it had become an issue by then."

"I can remember the teacher asking the class a question, knowing the answer and wanting to say it – but finding I couldn't speak. It makes you feel inadequate. And, as a kid, you do blame yourself: who else is there to blame? Of course, it's not actually anybody's fault."

"I still don't know why I developed a stammer in the first place; no-one does. There's a school of thought that says it's a mechanical thing; another says it's psychological. The truth is it's probably a bit of both."

NEW PERSPECTIVE: Jonathan's success has been fuelled by his sheer strength of will

Jonathan's speech problems intensified at school. "I was very fortunate: I was never bullied or picked on because of it. And I had a brilliant English teacher, who always gave me the option of reading in class or not: if I was feeling good, my speech would be much more fluent; if I was having a bad day, when I knew things weren't going to go my way, I'd struggle to say anything."

In a bid to control his stammer, Jonathan tried umpteen techniques – from traditional speech therapy to meditation classes. But, he explains, there is no such thing as a miracle cure: "Even now, every time I open my mouth I have to think about my breathing, think about the words I want to say and how to say them. It's a challenge. But I long ago realised there's no point wishing it away: you have to work with what you've got – and try to make the very best of it."

Going to university to study publishing, Jonathan says his stammer continued to have a big impact. "I'm a pretty sociable person; I like going out with my friends. But I would often leave social events early: if I felt my speech was becoming unmanageable, I'd just slope off."

"Part of the course involved giving presentations. A lot of people dislike public speaking; when you've got a stammer to contend with as well, it's a bit of a nightmare, to be honest."

Jonathan confesses he 'ruled out about 80 per cent of jobs because they involved speaking to the public' and says his first job interview was 'horrendous': "It was with a small publishing company in Cambridge. I could barely get a single word out. The interviewer was very patient and clearly wanted to give me a chance. But he did explain that he wouldn't be able to offer me the position if I couldn't manage my speech. It wasn't personal, it was fair enough."

Jonathan says using the telephone was a particular stumbling block. "When you're talking to someone face to face, they say 80 per cent of the communication is non-verbal. When you're on the phone, it's all about the voice – so that's an added pressure."

"My stammer has shaped a lot of my life. I ended up taking a whole series of jobs I didn't really want – even washing pots – because the jobs I did want involved too much talking. In the end, I decided to take the plunge, go back to university and retrain."

A turning point came when, aged just 22, Jonathan was diagnosed with testicular cancer. Going through a gruelling three months of chemo – 'there were times of great worry, like being rushed into A&E at Christmas because I thought I'd found another lump' – he says the experience gave him a new perspective.

"Although you don't realise it at the time, an experience like that does make you pause, reflect and rethink the direction you're taking. It made me want to make a change; to get more out of life."

A first-class degree in graphic design from Anglia Ruskin followed. Now a designer for Play.com, based in Histon, Jonathan says he's finally found his career niche: "I like what I do and I'm quite ambitious about it. It's a big change."

Jonathan credits 'constant support from family, friends and work colleagues' with helping him control his stammer. "My parents have been extremely patient and very supportive."

And he says a local support group – Cambridge Self Help For Adults Who Stammer, founded by another recovering stammerer, Robert Coe – has also played an important part. "It's been going for several years and I've been a member since the beginning. It's nice to know you're not alone."

A breakthrough happened last November, when Jonathan went through the acclaimed Starfish Programme. An immersive three-day course, run by Anne and David Blight, it teaches everything from breathing techniques to changing your mindset.

"I don't refer to myself as 'a stammerer' any more," explains Jonathan. "I'm a recovering stammerer. You can't let the condition define you; it's just a little part of who you are."

It's clear that Jonathan's success has also been fuelled by his sheer strength of will. "You do have to push the boundaries of your comfort zone. Last year, for example, I decided to take up a new sport – so I went along to a Korfbal session, knowing no-one, and introduced myself."

"There was a time when I couldn't have done that. It does require determination but, equally, it's not like you have a choice: you have to get on with it."

Jonathan says dealing with other people's reactions to his stammer can be a challenge in itself. "One of my friends used to laugh every time I stammered. I think it was embarrassment, not knowing what to do or say. Other people jump in and finish your sentences for you. My advice to anyone talking to someone with a stammer is 'Be patient. Give them the time they need.'"

Jonathan isn't immune to the comic aspects of living with a stammer. "I was introduced to a friend's father the other day. It was noisy, I was stammering and he misheard me: he thought my name was Bernard. I didn't see the point in correcting him," he recounts, with a laugh.

"There are ways of gaining control over your speech: I'm proof of that. And I'd also encourage them to stay positive."

"Yes, there are tough times. But I wouldn't be where I am today if I hadn't been through tough times – and I'm in a really good place."

Marie Curie Cancer Care Daffodil Appeal

DAFFODIL APPEAL

Marie Curie
Cancer Care

Wear a daffodil to support Marie Curie Nurses

Marie Curie Cancer Care is asking everyone to get behind its Great Daffodil Appeal by wearing a daffodil pin to support Marie Curie Nurses.

The appeal is Marie Curie's biggest fundraising campaign and throughout the month volunteer collectors are out asking people to wear a daffodil, in return for a donation. All money raised from the appeal helps provide more free nursing care for people with a terminal illness in their own homes.

Research shows around 65 per cent of people would like to die at home if they had a terminal illness, with a sizeable minority opting for hospice care. However, more than 50 per cent of cancer deaths still occur in hospital, the place people say they would least like to be. Since 2004 Marie Curie Cancer Care has been campaigning for more patients to be able to die in their place of choice and last year the charity made this possible for more than 31,000 people.

Daffodil pins can be picked up from local stores, Marie Curie volunteer collectors, Marie Curie Shops and the charity's website throughout March. For more information on how to get involved in the Great Daffodil Appeal, please visit: www.mariecurie.org.uk/daffodil or call 0845 601 3107.

PARKING: Cameron Findlay receives his award from the Rev Richard Coles at a ceremony in London

National award for Cameron

A SUFFOLK parking supremo has been voted Parking Person of the Year 2013 in a national award scheme.

Cameron Findlay, parking services manager for St Edmundsbury Borough Council, received his award at a ceremony organised by Parking Review and held in London. Cameron was named joint winner of the award with Sean Cleary of Cambridge City Council.

Cameron came to St Edmundsbury in 2005 and has seen the prestigious ParkMark awarded to all 21 car parks in the borough, including those in Haverhill. He refocused front line staff from mainly enforcement, and created a traffic management team and a scheme to reduce on-street queuing. Cameron said: "I am honoured to receive this award and can truly say that there is never a dull day in car parking.

"There is tremendous job satisfaction in improving the customer experience and I share this recognition with colleagues past and present."

Cllr Terry Clements, St Edmundsbury Cabinet member for Transport said: "The award is well deserved."

Drivers fined as police get tough

LORRY drivers were caught talking on their phones, not wearing seat belts and not in full control of their vehicles during a week-long campaign.

Two hundred offences were recorded during the crackdown on lorry drivers who break the law and put other road users at risk of death or serious injury.

The operation ran from Monday, March 11, to Friday, March 15, with the Suffolk Police Roads Policing Unit teaming up with colleagues from Norfolk and Essex. They patrolled dual carriageway roads in all three counties, using an unmarked lorry.

The aim was to detect and record traffic offences, particularly those that can distract drivers, including using a hand-held mobile phone, watching TV/ DVD/laptop, eating, drinking, steering with knees and reading a map/book/newspaper while driving.

Once the officer in the passenger seat of the lorry witnessed an offence, video evidence was recorded before the offending vehicle was pulled over by a unit in a pursuing team, consisting of two police cars and two police motorcycles.

BY JO DEEKS

Email: editorial@haverhillweeklynews.co.uk

Of the 200 offences recorded, 128 drivers were not wearing seat belts, while 35 were using a mobile phone while driving. Eight drivers were not in proper control of their vehicle and two vehicles were seized for having no insurance.

There were a further 26 drivers who had committed various offences and additionally one driver was arrested for having a fraudulent driving licence.

Around £12,000 in fines was handed out through fixed penalty notices.

Sgt Paul Ward of the Casualty

Reduction Team said: "This is the third operation we have held to clampdown on lorry drivers who flout the law.

"The consequences of a driver not having full control of their vehicle, being distracted, or not wearing a seat belt can have devastating results.

"This was a very successful operation with a number of drivers dealt with for a range of offences.

"However, the figures do reflect the fact that a disappointing amount of people have the wrong attitudes when they are behind the wheel of a heavy goods vehicle.

"We will continue to educate lorry drivers about the dangers of driving whilst using a mobile, not wearing a seat belt and other poor driving habits, to keep our roads safe."

To report bad driving, call 101.

the GUIDE

NOW: The Stranglers
Baz Warne, Jet Black,
JJ Burnel and Dave
Greenfield

Giants are back

AFTER forming in London in the mid-70s, The Stranglers came of age in the burgeoning British pub-rock scene.

By the time punk exploded in 1976, the band – Hugh Cornwell, Jet Black, Dave Greenfield and JJ Burnel – had played in virtually every influential venue in the capital, winning fans and honing their performing skills.

While not fitting the punk template quite as neatly as the likes of Sex Pistols and The Clash, there was enough snarling energy and power in their music for them to ride the wave while it lasted.

"None of the other punk bands liked us," says Burnel. "It's funny hearing young bands mention us as an influence now, because back then no band would ever admit to liking us."

He recalls a fateful incident in 1976 when he had a fight with Paul Simonon of The Clash, with Simonon's bandmates, plus Sex Pistols, The Ramones and members of the music press on one side, and The Stranglers and their friends on the other.

"It was more handbags and a bit of growling than anything," he says, "but from then on, the lines were drawn."

As punk subsided, however, The Stranglers endured. And have continued to do so, releasing 17 albums and touring ever since.

"We've been around for so long and I think there's a bit of respect come our way recently," says Burnel.

"We've always conducted ourselves in a certain way. We haven't released endless Best Of compilations and box sets, and so on.

"There's always been new music and we've always tried new things, never imitating ourselves, so that's afforded us a bit more respect. We've ploughed our own furrow, whether people like us or not."

A turning point came around 10 years ago when Burnel isolated himself to write Norfolk Coast.

For the first time in a long time, perhaps since original vocalist Hugh Cornwell's departure in 1990, the press were interested and new fans were drawn to the band.

The renaissance continued with Suite XVI in 2006, and in 2012 was capped by Giants, the band's best and most acclaimed album since the mid-80s.

CAMBRIDGE'S Young Actors Company is performing three productions at The Mumford Theatre this week.

First up is The White Rose and the Swastika. Adrian Flynn's play explores true-life events during the Second World War and the oft-told tale of the Scholl family, but unusually, not from Sophie Scholl's perspective, but that of her brother – Hans.

The second production is Treasure Island, a new and darker interpretation of Robert Louis Stevenson's classic tale, made accessible for younger audiences by the Junior Stage Academy.

Finally, there's Black Hands/Dead Section by award-winning playwright Van Badham. Originally commissioned by the London Academy of Music and Dramatic Art, the play charts the rise and fall of the infamous Baader-Meinhof Gang and the Red Army Faction during their decade of terror from 1967 to 1977.

These productions mark the start of a huge year for Young Actors before they embark on a feature film, shot on a Royal Air Force base in Cambridgeshire, and two productions at this year's Edinburgh Festival Fringe.

The White Rose and the Swastika is on tomorrow at 7pm, Treasure Island is on Saturday at 2pm and Black Hands/Dead Section is on tonight and Saturday at 7pm.

OUR first live theatre performance comes direct from the National Theatre tonight at 7pm.

People, a new play by Alan Bennett, is mischievously funny and tells of an ageing aristocrat who decides to get rid of her crumbling stately home.

Lady Dorothy Stacpoole (Frances de la Tour) is an elderly former model who lives in a disintegrating pile.

Now the impoverished spinster has to face up to disposing of the old place, although her younger sister wants to pass it to the National Trust, Dorothy isn't so sure, dismissing the Trust as purveyors of dull 'pretend England'. With good reviews, this sounds a must see!

■ Join comedian, writer, broadcaster and all-round British institution Arthur Smith when he kicks off the Haverhill Comedy Festival long weekend tomorrow at 8pm.

■ Wayne Goodman returns on Saturday at 2.30pm performing close-up magic with a fun approach and amazing sleight-of-hand, a magic and comedy show suitable for all the family. Under-15s can come in for £1.

JACK THE GIANT SLAYER
certificate 12A, 1h54m

THE English folktale of Jack and The Beanstalk is given a smart CGI-heavy makeover in this fast-paced fantasy. It takes the familiar story of magic beans and a blood-thirsty behemoth as the foundations for a delightfully old-fashioned tale of derring-do replete with a boo-hiss villain and swooning damsel in distress.

A storybook opening sequence recounts the legend of King Erik, who, with the help of a magical crown, defeated the giants and banished them to their kingdom in the clouds. Many centuries later, farmboy Jack (Nicholas Hoult) is heading into town to sell his horse and cart when encounters a monk (Simon Lowe) bearing a pouch of stolen beans. "These beans have the power to change the world," the holy man tells Jack, "so don't lose them and whatever you do, don't get them wet".

That night a sudden deluge of rain causes one of the seeds to take root and a beanstalk rises terrifyingly into the sky, taking with it Jack's home and Princess Isabelle (Eleanor Tomlinson), who happened to be passing in the downpour. When King Brahmwell (Ian McShane) learns of his daughter's fate, he organises a search party including valiant knight Elmont (Ewan McGregor), his right-hand man Craze (Eddie Marsan), Isabelle's conniving fiancé Roderick (Stanley Tucci), snivelling sidekick Wicke (Ewen Bremner) and, of course, Jack. At the top the beanstalk they discover an army of gargantuan warriors led by two-headed General Fallon (Bill Nighy, John Kassir) and his lieutenants, Fee, Fye, Foe and Fumm.

Jack The Giant Slayer establishes a cracking pace and there are few pauses between the breathlessly orchestrated set pieces, including a first encounter with the giants viewed through Jack's eyes as he holds his breath underwater. Hoult is an endearing hero who, despite being plagued by a fear of heights, comes to the fore in Isabelle's hour of need. Their romance is sweet, tempered by Tucci's delightful scenery-chewing as the Machiavellian traitor in the royal court. Parents may want to view the film before unleashing very young children into this fairytale realm because the violence is quite strong for a 12A certificate, including at least one member of supporting cast losing his head between a giant's festering teeth. However, the bloodshed isn't gratuitous and director Bryan Singer keeps most of the dismemberment off screen or blurred in the background.

Last week's answer: LECTURING

Looking for a new job?

Odds stacked against you?

We've got one simple move...

To get you back in the game

Sowing the good seeds

If your lawn looks tired and tatty and is covered in weeds, moss and bare patches, it might be time to bite the bullet and sow a new one.

The advantage of sowing a lawn from seed is obviously the cost – it is much cheaper to sow seed than to buy turves which may not be the exact quality you want and will also deteriorate rapidly if they are not laid as soon as you have bought them.

You can also pick your day to sow. It doesn't matter if the weather suddenly turns frosty – you can just wait for it to warm up a bit. There is more of an urgency if you buy turf – and if you are having it laid for you, you can't pick and choose your day.

With lawn seed, you can also select a number of different grasses which will be suitable for particular areas of your garden. If you have children you are likely to need a tougher variety than if you just want a velvety lawn which is rarely set foot upon.

But remember that there is no point in buying a very fine grade unless you are prepared to cut it at least twice a week, feed it, water it and give it all the TLC it needs.

Growing a lawn from seed requires much initial preparation of the soil. It is hard work, but it will be worth it in the end.

You will need to dig the ground over thoroughly, to a spade's depth. If you have a really big area to sow, it may be worth hiring a rotavator, but make sure you get rid of all the weeds beforehand. Otherwise, a rotavator will simply chop up running roots which will then spread, encouraging weeds to spring up all over the place.

If you have very heavy clay soil, lighten it with grit, which you need to dig in. Rotted manure or compost should be added to light soil to give it some substance.

You can level minor humps and bumps as you go, but if the site is seriously uneven, you'll need to remove the topsoil and stack it somewhere, level off the subsoil and then replace the topsoil layer.

Remember when digging that the clods need to be broken down or your lawn will end up uneven. Trample roughly dug earth with your feet and break up hard clods with the back of your garden fork.

One of the most important jobs when sowing a new lawn is to consolidate the soil, firming the site as you go. Walk in overlapping steps, treading over the whole area with your heels, before sprinkling on a general fertiliser such as blood, fish and bone or a special lawn fertiliser. You need to choose a day when the soil is fairly dry and not sticking to your boots.

Finally, rake over the area and remove any remaining stones and debris, making sure that the surface level is firm, with no soft spots that will sink later.

The surface should have a fine, crumbly texture. You may have to go over it a few times before it is how you want it.

Once the soil is prepared, you are ready to sow.

It is, in fact, best to sow in late summer or early autumn, when the ground is still moist, but April is also a good time, provided you don't do it during an excessively dry spell. Sow at around 50g per square metre and if you are unsure, practise first on a sheet of paper on the garage floor, marking the area into metre squares with canes and string.

The late, great gardener Geoff Hamilton recommended an easier way of sprinkling the right amount of seed into a set area – stand with your feet wide apart, lean forward as far as you can go and that's about a square metre.

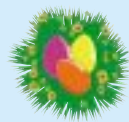

Sprinkle two handfuls of seed over the area you are covering and that should be about the right amount.

Once you have scattered the seed, rake it in with a spring-tine lawn rake – don't try to bury the seed or germination will be patchy – and then water if it doesn't rain within 24 hours. Try to use your finest rose on your watering can or sprinkler, though, or it will wash the seed into patches.

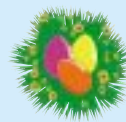

You will also need to protect the new lawn from birds, which are prone to using the seed bed as a dust bath. Put up some posts with flapping strips of plastic attached to frighten them off.

Seedlings should appear two to three weeks after sowing, and when the grass is two or three inches high, roll it lightly using the back roller of a cylinder mower with the cutting head held high. This firms down the soil lifted by the seedlings and encourages them to produce new shoots.

After another few days, the lawn can be mown very lightly with the cutting blade at its highest. Make sure your mower blades are sharp. Don't cut the grass too closely in the first year and make sure it receives plenty of water when necessary – and try not to let the kids run riot in the first 12 months after sowing.

Dacia dishes do-anything charm

THE once maligned Skoda brand has been turned in to a huge triumph thanks to investment from Volkswagen, and one would imagine thoughts of a similar level of success were going through Renault's mind when they took control of Dacia in 1999, writes Phil Huff.

Fourteen years later and the Romanian brand is finally ready to launch in the UK, spearheading their cost-conscious attack with the Dacia Sandero and Duster.

Slightly larger than a Ford Fiesta, the Sandero is a compact hatchback starting at just £5,995 for the Access model. There simply is not a cheaper car on the market, but does that make it good value?

Out on the roads around

Cambourne the Sandero felt very reasonable. It's certainly comfortable enough for most, although there can be a fair bit of noise coming into the cabin from the engine and tyres. It goes, turns and stops without fuss, never doing any of them quite as quickly as you might expect from a Fiesta or Corsa, but without any drama.

It's all much the same with the Sandero's big brother, the Duster. This sits on the same platform as the Sandero, another move towards cutting manufacturing costs, but is modified to produce a compact 4x4 crossover that comes in at 4.3 metres long. It's aimed squarely at the Nissan Qashqai and Skoda Yeti, or would be if it also didn't undercut them by a significant margin.

As with the Sandero, I tried the Access trim level. For the four wheel drive version tested you would need to pay just £10,995, but by keeping things as just two wheel drive a further £2,000 can be saved. Once again you're limited to white at this level, but the full range of colours open up if you spend a little more.

Driving the Duster feels remarkably familiar after stepping out of the Sandero. Again, the car is safe and predictable, never doing anything unpredictable even when pushed unnecessarily hard.

There's real off-road capability with the Duster too. It might not be challenging the latest Range Rover, but it will be able to get you out of some very sticky situations. However, by sticking with the cheaper two-wheel drive option you do get a bigger boot.

It is the interior that marks the biggest difference between the two, the stretched platform offering much more space for occupants. The boot is also quite sizeable, with folding rear seats making it a remarkably practical proposition.

Both cars are designed to be cheap to buy and run. There's no pretending from Dacia that they're something they're not. There is a palpable air of honesty about the cars, the budget price tag being worn like a badge of honour.

For all their flaws, I'm convinced. I'll have a base model Duster please.

The Dacia Duster: Real off-road capability is a nice surprise.

Quartet's belting display!

FOUR students from Chalkstone Karate Club have attained their black belts. A gruelling exam, which took just over two hours, saw candidates demonstrating numerous techniques, kata (preset sequence of moves) balance kicking and kumite (fighting) in front of a panel of three examiners. Colin Kicks and his wife Marie, along with Liam Purr and his sister Saffron all gained their 1st Dan black belts. It was a special achievement for Saffron Purr, who became the youngest member of the club to achieve the rank, having celebrated her 12th birthday a week earlier. Percy kick-starts Brook recovery

Wickhambrook 5 Warboys 2
CAMBRIDGE & DIST COLTS LEAGUE, UNDER-17A

WICKHAMBROOK battled back from a goal down to earn victory.

Man of the match Ross Whiting and Tom Pinker combined to set up James Percy to level, and it remained 1-1 at half time.

Brook went ahead when Dan Espin combined with Harry Willett, the latter firing home, but Warboys equalised.

Wickhambrook continued to press and got ahead once more with Percy finishing at the second attempt, and Pinker then flicked on for David Crowley to race through to score the fourth. The hosts rounded off matters when Jack Whiting and Tom Warnock combined to set up Kaine Fryer to thump home from 16 yards.

■ In Division 13A, a dominant second-half display and an Ethan Murphy hat-trick saw West Watting return from their away match at Shelford & Stapleford Striker with a 4-2 win. Chinomnso Nkem-Peul was the

Kingham helps get Hammatt off mark

Woodbridge Tn 0
Haverhill Rov 2
THURLOW NUNN LEAGUE, PREMIER DIV

KIERON Hammatt celebrated his first win as Haverhill boss as Rovers overcame strugglers Woodbridge Town 2-0 in the Thurlow Nunn League Premier Division.

Saturday's hosts had not won in 11 games and Rovers quickly put them under pressure with chances for Jack Higgs and Jack Wilkinson, but the score remained goalless at half time.

Rovers keeper Joe Harrington was forced to make a good save to deny Ross Gilfedder in the 71st minute and he was called into action again shortly afterwards to keep out Aaron Churchyard's effort.

But then on the 80th minute, Stuart Kingham pounced on a loose ball after Sam Holmes' header had been saved, and fired Rovers in front.

The second goal arrived in stoppage time when Jake Twinn played in Higgs, who confidently fired home.

Rovers are due to travel to Wivenhoe in the league on Saturday.

Great Bentley 2 HAS 5
ESSEX & SUFFOLK BORDER LEAGUE

HSA claimed a vital three points in their quest for promotion with a hard-fought win in a game where the windy conditions played a big part.

They got off to the worst possible start when, after three minutes, they failed to deal with a corner and Bentley forced the ball home following a scramble.

In the 10th minute Callum Harrison fired a half-volley from the edge of the box that hit the post and went to safety.

This seemed to spark HSA into action and they scored twice in an excellent 15-minute spell. The equaliser came when Tom Hardwick's 40-yard pass picked out Paul Hunt's run into the box and his flicked header found the corner of the net.

The away side went ahead when keeper Liam Savage's goal kick was helped on by Craig Cutts and Ryan Weaver calmly beat the keeper with a deft lob.

The remainder of the half was mainly played out in midfield, though right on the stroke of half time Great Bentley found an equaliser as a rebound flew into the net off the unfortunate Hardwick after a good save by Savage.

As has been the case so often this season, HSA produced an excellent second-half performance to take the points. The lead was restored when Alex Clark beat his marker and unselfishly squared the ball across the six-yard box allowing the unmarked Weaver to roll the ball home.

On the hour HSA made the game safe as Cutts capitalised on a defensive error and fired past the keeper when one on one.

Goal No 5 came shortly after when Clark scored his first goal in senior football, firing home after a scramble in the box.

Both teams had further chances, with Bentley hitting the bar twice and Cutts, Harrison, Weaver and Luke Strutton going close for HSA, who entertain Heddinghams United on Saturday.
